I belong to the baseball club at my school. At first, I thought it would be easy to do well in both baseball and studying. I love playing baseball. I practice it very hard every day. I want to be a professional baseball player. Also, I want to play baseball in America in the future. So, I wanted to study English hard, but at first it was not easy for me to do both. When I went back to the *dormitory, I often went to bed early without A. I was so tired. I often forgot to do my homework and couldn't understand *what my teachers said. 【あ】

Sometimes I was not able to *make myself understood in English, but it was a lot of fun to talk with him. I said, "You also practice baseball hard. ①[study, do, hard, you, time, to, any, have]?" He said, "Yes, I do. I try to *concentrate in class and ask the teachers when I can't understand something." I was surprised that he did well in both baseball and studying. We enjoyed talking about a lot of things. 【い】

I started to study English harder because I wanted to write to my new friend in English. Also, I started to concentrate more in my English class, and began to understand it better than before. I needed time to *review the class, but I often *fell asleep early because I was tired. This was still ②a big problem. I told my homeroom teacher, and she said, "When I was a high school student, I often came home late and was tired, so it was difficult to study at night. I got up early *instead and studied before I went to school. I learned to use my time *effectively. You practice baseball every day because you want to be a better baseball player, don't you? If you want to make your English better, you have to study English every day, too. I know some students who can do well in both club activities and studying. You can do it, too." The next day, I tried to get up early. 【う】

Now I study English every morning. This has made my English better. It is not easy to do well in both, but I'll never give up. 【え】
