7. 次の話はApple社の創始者であるSteve Jobsについて述べたものです。これを読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。

(1) Steve Jobs is very famous for starting Apple. In 1972, he entered college, but he *dropped out after six months. Then he went to only a *calligraphy lesson at the college. So now we can see beautiful *fonts in Apple products. He started Apple in 1976 with his friends, but in 1984, he *got fired from the company. During the next five years, he started two new companies, and fell in love with a woman, Laurene. She became his wife later. In 1996, Steve could work at Apple again.

(2) Steve had many new plans for the future. However, he had cancer in 2003. Laurene, his doctors and his friends advised Steve to have *surgery soon. But Steve tried to *treat his cancer by changing his *diet. But the cancer grew. So in July 2004, he agreed to have surgery. After that, Steve returned to work. However, he was losing weight, and didn't look well. He didn't talk much about being sick. But in 2005, he gave a famous speech about his life at Stanford University. After that, Steve also began thinking about making new products that surprised people around the world.

(3) By 2005, cell phones were everywhere. Steve had a cell phone, but he didn't like it. It didn't work well or look good. Steve decided to make a phone that people could fall in love with. In 2007, at a show for new Apple products, Steve showed the *audience the iPhone. The iPhone was not just a cell phone. It was a powerful personal computer that fit in your pocket. It had a touch screen *instead of buttons. The iPhone made every other phone *outdated.

(4) In 2009, his cancer returned and he had *a liver transplant. *Despite his bad health, he had a new surprise for the public. Next year, Steve released the iPad, Apple's new type of computer. It was smaller, *thinner, and lighter than anything before it. It was much larger than the iPhone so we could see a whole Web page in front of us and control it with our fingers. Apple sold three hundred thousand iPads in one day. In August 2011, it became the most *successful company in the world. Two months later, he died at the age of 56. Everyone felt that Steve Jobs changed our way of life. Thanks to him, we can see great *technology today.

6. 次の英文は、日本人で初めてアメリカに足を踏み入れたと言われているジョン万次郎 (Manjiro) について述べられたものである。英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。

In 1841, Manjiro went out to the sea in a little ship with some older boys. They were catching many fish, but then a very strong wind and rain came. The little ship was broken, and they could not come back from the sea.

After a few days, Manjiro and his friends had no food or water to drink. They all became sick. On the eighth day, they saw a small island. The January water of the sea was cold, but they were able to swim to the island. And they lived there for six months. One day in June, a ship saw Manjiro and his friends. It was an American ship sailing to Hawaii. Manjiro and his friends were saved.

Manjiro and his friends could not speak English, and the American people on the ship could not speak Japanese. But Manjiro quickly learned a lot of things. Soon Manjiro and the captain of the ship, Captain Whitfield, became friends. The captain asked Manjiro, "Do you want to come to America and go to school?" Manjiro said yes. With the help of Captain Whitfield, he became the first Japanese to land in America. Manjiro was only fourteen years old when he arrived there.

Manjiro lived with the captain's family and went to school. He learned English and many other things. He also learned about the country and the American people. He was the first Japanese that went to school in America.

About ten years later, when he came back to Japan, Japan's doors were still closed to other countries. So he was questioned by the Tokugawa Government. But, at that time, Japan really () (①) () (②) () () and knew a lot about America.

In 1853, when Kurofune, the Black Ships, came to Japan, the Tokugawa Government asked him to help the people of the government, and he did.
